At a meeting of the Lyceum Committee of the Maysville Board of Education held at the High School building Wednesday evening it was definitely decided to give a lyceum course at the High School auditorium during the coming fall and winter and this best possible talent will be secured. Whether the committee will decide to procure all of the talent from one bureau or not will be decided when the talent is presented but if necessary to get a good, strong eight number course, the talent may be selected from two or more companies.

Prof. Caplinger today stated that the committee will select the strongest and best course they can find and the people of Maysville and vicinity who enjoy these courses are assured that the course to be selected for the coming season will be as strong if not stronger than any course given in the past.

MAKE FLAG FOR GO-TO-SUNDAY-SCHOOL CELEBRATION

Sunday School Workers Anxious to Have Many Banners an Advertising Big Attendance Effort.

Those chiefly interested in the promoting of Go-to-Sunday-School-Day May fourth are very anxious that all Sunday School folks bestir themselves in the matter of making flags for display during the week prior to the big day. Last year everyone was invited to prepare an original window card advertising Go-to-Sunday-School-Day. The response to this plan was most generous. Many of the cards were truly artistic showing great talent in those who made them. And there is no question but that the advertising given by these cards had much to do in making of Go-to-Sunday-School-Day last year the best yet in point of attendance as well as good done. Now let everyone get busy on the flag question. Get a piece of cotton cloth, draw some appropriate design upon it, attach it to a stick like any other flag, and then place it on display.

Mason county schools have been given special honor in that the best designed flag from our county will be adopted by the State Association as the official flag for the Sunday School Association of Kentucky. We could name any number of young people in the city of Maysville who have the talent to make a winning flag. Let each and every one make the effort. Any information desired about the making of the flag will be graciously given by the chairman, Mrs. J. C. Burwell. Call her up by phone and talk to her about it.

There are thirty-two Sunday Schools in Mason county outside the limits of Maysville, that is provided that all schools on the roll of the County Sunday School Association are in running order. In reporting the attendance of the schools the county and city are kept separate for the purpose of comparison. Would it not be of interest for the county schools to stir themselves and see how soon they can make their total attendance equal that of the Maysville schools. The first requisite is for each any every school to report each Sunday. Then as the totals go up it will create a desire to catch up with the city schools that will put some spirit into the contest. Watch for the comparison next week. All get ready for May fourth—Go-to-Sunday-School-Day. Everybody go.

NEGRO BOY CHARGED WITH FORGERY GOES TO GREENDALE

Prosecution on Forgery Indictment is Suspended in Circuit Court and Harry Warfield Will Go to Reform School Until He is of Age.

On motion of District Prosecutor B. S. Grannis in Circuit Court this morning prosecution in the case of the Commonwealth vs. Harry Warfield, colored, was suspended and the boy will elect to go to the State School of Reform at Greendale to remain until he becomes 21 years of age. The boy is now 17 and will have a term of four years in Greendale to serve.

It will be remembered that several weeks ago Warfield was arrested when he was attempting to pass a check to which he had forged the name of his uncle. It then developed that he had passed several other such forged checks and had obtained the money on them.

He was indicted by the last Grand Jury but the indictment will now be fled away and he will be returned to the Juvenile Judge for sentence to the State School of Reform. Under a recent ruling boys sent to the state school of reform must be indicted by a Grand Jury or the county is required to pay their maintenance.

BIG NAVY BAND IS COMING HERE NEXT MONDAY

Great Lakes Training Station Band Will Be in Maysville All Day Monday For Concert—Victory Loan Workers Here For Luncheon at Noon.

The Victory Loan opens Monday and Mason county's campaign will start off with a boom.

Chairman James N. Kehoe, of the Mason County Victory Loan committee, received a long distance telephone call this morning from district headquarters at Cleveland in which he was advised that the Great Lakes Naval Training Station Band of some fifty pieces would arrive in Maysville over the L. & N. on a special train Sunday night and would remain in Mayaville until Monday afternoon.

Mr. Kehoe had been planning to have a general meeting of all of the Victory loan workers in the county in this city the first of next week and he has now selected Monday as the day for the meeting.

The big band will give a free concert at the Washington Theater Monday morning at 10:30 o'clock. There will be several speakers with the band that will start the campaign off in proper shape.

At noon arrangements have been made for all of the county workers to meet at luncheon in the Maysville Boys' Band room on the third floor of the Caproni building. At this luncheon the members of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station Band will be the guests of the local organization and plans for the campaign will be made and properly launched.

The people of this section have been anxious to hear the great Navy Band since it was here in the last loan campaign. It will be remembered that the band arrived here in the influenza epidemic and because of orders of the Board of Health the band could not give a public concert but it did play some little while marching through the business district of the city. This band was organized and trained at Great Lakes Naval Training Station, near Chi ago by John Phillip Sousa, the world's greatest band master and they have been recognized as among the best musical organization in the country.

It is expected that Maysville will be well filled with people on next Monday to hear the band and to see the Fifth Liberty Loan started off in Mason county. Certainly all county precinct workers will be on hand.

OUR POLICY

To support such measures as are unquestionably for the good of Mason County as an entire community, rather than such propositions as are in favor of the individual interest, or of one section as against another. And likewise to correctly and consistently oppose all things that are not for the good of the County as a whole.

MORE DAYLIGHT AND BOLSHIEVISM

We are now on "more daylight" schedule, as the result of moving our clocks ahead one hour. When the results of daylight saving are considered it seems beyond comprehension that an endeavor should be made to do away with this law. Yet, this was attempted at the last session of Congress by the introduction of two bills repealing the law and the insertion of a rider in an appropriation bill looking to the same end.

The present law gives us an extra hour of daylight for 210 days, starting the last Sunday in March and ending the last Sunday in October. That means to one hundred million people more than two billion hours of extra daylight.

It means millions of extra hours for home food production.

It means millions of extra hours of health giving recreation to bench, shop, desk and counter workers.

It means millions of extra hours for the playground children.

It means millions of dollars saved in electric light and gas bills. It means millions of dollars saved in coal as the result of cutting down those bills.

All these sum up to better citizenship, clearer thinking and additions to the savings of the workers. All these make a mighty wall against the unrest creeping into certain quarters. Take the home food producer, as an example. The lure of the Bolsheviki may interest him at first. But he has his home, his family, his job. He knows down in his heart that the Bolsheviki plan to take over the running of the country and the management of the plant in which he works smacks of the impossible.

He knows neither he nor the world is ready for that and never will be. He knows he is a citizen of the best country on earth and he knows if he does his part it will continue to improve. He can improve it greatly by putting ten bushels of potatoes from his garden into his cellar. He will relieve the food situation just that much. The family in the victory garden this summer is the foundation of the best citizenship.

In Europe they consider the extra hour of daylight one of their chief reconstruction assets. With us it will work wonders in offsetting the propaganda of unrest, for it means health and wealth. Let us all honor Benjamin Franklin, apostle of thrift, who tried to present us with this great boon more than a century ago.

JAIL DELIVERY IS

ATTEMPTED AT GEORGETOWN

The Georgetown (O.) News-Democrat says: While five prisoners in the county jail thought they would make a getaway, Thursday night, yet they never knew their chance was very remote. Sheriff Miller was apprised that such an attempt was to be made, and the watch which was maintained developed that the prisoners arose near midnight and started operations, which were only stopped when one of his sons awoke and because he erled caused the prisoners to retire. The following morning Sheriff Miller and Deputy Sheriff Neu made an investigation, finding a large pipe wrench concealed in the water box of the toilet. When confronted, finally Charles Cook admitted how it came to be there, and the wrench was taken in charge. Search of the cells failed to reveal anything else, and the Sheriff is of the opinion that the prisoners had thought they could twist the bars of the windows and make their get-away.

KITCHENER'S DEATH TOLD
TORPEDO STRUCK HAMP.
SHIRE DURING RAGING STORM

London.—Lord Kitchener and his staff did not even reach the deck of the British cruiser Hampshire after she struck a mine off the coast of Scotland one stormy night in June, 1916, according to a warrant officer who has just told the story of the sinking to a correspondent of the Manchester Guardian.

Questions concerning the sinking of the Hampshire have been asked in parliament because of the persistent rumor that the vessel had been sunk by a submarine and Lord Kitchener had been carried off a prisoner to Germany. No detailed statement, however, has ever been officially given out. The name of the officer who now tells the story has not been disclosed.

Four days after the Jutland battle, according to the officer, the Hampshire took Lord Kitchener aboard on June 5th, and set out with about 800 persons on board in "the foulest weather known in that region." She was escorted by two destroyers, who were unable to face the storm and returned to port. Everything on board the Hampshire was lashed down, and only one hatchway was left open.

About 8 o'clock in the evening the ship was shaken by a terrific explosion and the crew scrambled for the deck. Officers quickly took their posts, but their orders could not be heard because of the raging storm and the terrific sound of escaping steam. Immediately after the explosion there was another and all lights went out, which added to the confusion.

The officer, with a companion, cut the lashings of a life-boat, it being impossible to launch the boats in the terrible sea, and the raft was slipped over the side. It turned upside down but finally righted, and he with others found themselves afloat. Almost immediately the ship went down, not more than five minutes after the first explosion. The officer did not see Lord Kitchener on deck, and it is his opinion that no only one hatchway was open, the only men who reached the deck were those who went that way. Although much confused, he recalls trying to open a number of other hatchways while trying to reach the deck and found them all battered down.

The raft drifted with the gale for five hours, during which time many of the men were washed from the raft, while others died and rolled into the net in the center. The raft was then tossed through an opening in a rocky reef and bleached on an island.

The officer scoffed at the suggestion that Lord Kitchener had been saved, and was quite sure that the Hampshire had been mined and not torpedoed.

YOUR GROCER.

SIGNS OF DANGER

That Should Be Heeded by Maysville People.

There's serious danger in neglecting any weakness of the kidneys. The warning that Nature gives should not be overlooked. If trouble by too frequent passage of the kidney secretions; burning or scalding; if the secretions are highly colored and contain sediment when left standing—if you have backache, too, with frequent headaches and dizziness, make up your mind that your kidneys are affected and begin using some reliable kidney remedy. Deaths from kidney disease have increased in the United States alone, 72 per cent. in the last 20 years. The risk is great—you can't afford to delay. Maysville people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Can you ask for better proof of merit than the statement of this Maysville resident?

W. H. Lynch, shoemaker, E. Third St., says: "My kidneys were weak and sluggish. At one time the action of my kidneys stopped altogether. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time the action of my kidneys became normal. I kept on taking them and they completely relieved me." (State given January 9, 1912.)

TROUBLE NEVER RETURNED

On November 14, 1916, Mr. Lynch said: "I haven't had any need of a kidney remedy since I last recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. They have permanently cured me." Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Lynch had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.

The MAN with a COUNTRY

criticism; they became scoffers, malcontents, voicing malignant skepticism. And when—in the anxious days of the summer of 1918—they saw the French structure of defense begin to crumble under the terrible offensive of the Hun armies, they began to feel their convictions had been vindicated—that the continued defeat of the Allied armies was due to the nationwide incompetency of the war machine built up by the government. They began to predict disaster for Allied Arms; they told their friends how it might have been different, how disaster might have been averted and how victory might have been won.

However, they gave little thought to the gigantic task faced by the khaki-clad boys who, to the number of two or three million, were at grips with the Hun hordes on the battlefields of France and Belgium. The boys were not in their mental vision; they were remote and far, and for all they knew might have been a dream-army. Not experiencing the emotions of sympathy that fill the heart of the zealous patriot, the mighty gulf that separated them from the horrors of war; they lacked the power to bring the war picture into their mental vision; they could not see beyond themselves and the universe of cynicism which encompassed them.

For the third time Falltown failed to subscribe its quota; and in the fall when the Fourth Loan campaign began, the patriot element of Falltown began to betray some curiosity as to the identity of the citizens who were playing the role of bond-slackers.

Corwin had not failed to note the change that was coming over Falltown's citizens. During the days of the first loan there had been much enthusiasm, and the "drive" had been launched amid music, flag-waving, the ringing of bells and the blowing of horns. Corwin was convinced that many persons had subscribed to the loan while under the spell of the enthusiasm aroused by the noise and the clatter. Some of those buyers had not been so enthusiastic during the second campaign; and when the third came there was still less visible enthusiasm. And the fourth campaign began with remarkable quietness.

Corwin, going and coming, watching faces in the street, noting the absence of enthusiasm, smiled derisively. He told himself that the people were beginning to see what he himself had divined from the first—that the war was a monstrous blunder, that certain capitalists had forced the country into it, that it was a partisan affair and that every man was considering only his own interests in supporting it.

That was it! Corwin had found it—the dominant influence of the whole thing—Individualism. Individualism symbolized greed, selfishness and the lust for power. All men lived their lives with selfish aims, looking toward personal gain. To the business man the prosecution of that aim meant wealth; to the idler it meant luxury; to the ruler of a nation it meant power; and to the soldier it meant personal glory.

And that was all, everything. Men played of country as though the land they lived in possessed some kind of a spirit—a soul which in its entirety was composed of many units, each unit a dweller in the land. That theory was farcical, ridiculous, absurd!

For there was a greater power than soul. It was human nature. And the nature of man made him individualistic. He ran in cliques, to be sure—he liked company; he was eager to be surrounded by his fellows. But nevertheless, he was individualistic—he was looking out for himself. That was what made him choose as his mate a woman in whom he saw those merits and virtues that he could not see in other women. It was what caused him to build a house—a better house than that occupied by his neighbor. It was the desire for self-gratification which made him ambitious to succeed, to gain wealth, power and glory.

Country? To be sure. The thing commonly called a man's country was the place in which he lived—the land he inhabited, the place in which he made his home and in which he raised his children. But every man had a country—he must have a country, a place on Earth to live. God had given him that! But the mere fact that he lived upon Earth did not signify that he was to go out to kill other men who inhabited the Earth with him. There was no such thing as country when it conflicted with a man's individuality. The man—not country—was supreme.

And thus man was man, and country was another thing—secondary, chimerical, non-existent. Country was an imaginary estate, a land inhabited by a race of humans who were all individualistic, all imbued with the same desire—to get ahead, to thrive, to live. There was no common spirit or soul that brought men together in patriotic bondage. Some men professed the sentiment, but few lived it.

Corwin knew a real estate man who had formerly dealt in second mortgages and chattel loans. The fellow pretended to be patriotic, yet Corwin knew he was disconcerting Liberty Bonds. He knew men who were whispering to their fellows that the bonds would one day be valueless, that they should be disposed of quickly, even at a loss, for the day was not far distant when the Government would repudiate all its debts. He knew other men who were profiteering; he had heard other men curse the Government because they were not permitted to make greater profits—because the Food Administrator had decreed against them. Still other men were idling in offices, on Government service—men of draft age who should have been at the front—if they felt the patriotism they professed.

Had these men a country? What did country mean to them? It meant to them what it meant to every man who lived in it—nothing but a place in which they could play their particular trade for the purpose of gain and power.

However, one day during the end of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, Corwin saw an aged woman slowly approach a Loan booth on Main street. She wore a faded black dress, a bonnet with a string attached, tied in a drooping bow under her chin. Her shoes were not good, and she had a look of having been pinched by poverty all her later days.

It was the glow in her eyes that commanded Corwin's attention. Her face was wrinkled and seamed, but her eyes were bright, and luminous with an expression that made Corwin gulp with a nameless emotion.

"I'd like to buy a bond, sir—fifty dollars," she said, quietly, to the salesman.

"You're pretty old to be buying bonds, Grandma," said the latter. "Are you sure you want one?"

"Old, am I?" she replied, raising her voice defiantly. "Well, when I get so old that I can't try to do something for my country, I shall be old indeed!"

The salesman caught Corwin's eyes, and laughed.

"That ought to make some tight wads rather ashamed of themselves—hadn't it?" he said.

Corwin flushed, turned abruptly on his heel and walked away, embarrassed, humiliated. For here—in the person of the old lady—was a manifestation of that spirit which he had long denied.

CHAPTER VI

It was only a few weeks later when the news flashed to a waiting, anxious world that the Hun line was wavering; that American troops were being hurled against it and that the crisis for which the world had waited long was at hand. Reports of engagements in which the Yankee boys had conducted themselves with a heroism that upheld the traditions of their country began to leak through, to occupy prominent places in the newspapers.

Corwin noted the change in the atmosphere of Falltown. There had been deep concern in most of the faces of Falltown's citizens. Some of the faces had borne a harried appearance, and the haunting wistfulness in the eyes of some had betrayed their fear of the outcome. There were men who passed their friends without a nod of recognition—their minds, their hearts, their souls were in France with their sons who were facing the appalling hazard of death. There were others who scowled; still others whose eyes were luminous with pride; there were still others whose eyes glowed with a sorrow that would be eternal.

Falltown had been a place of subdued voices—of dread expectancy. It had seemed to be waiting—waiting for something to happen.

And that something had happened. Falltown had been awaiting the news it had now received. And in the faces of men on the streets; in the faces of women and children, there had come a new expression. It was that of grim joy—the savage exultation of the victor.

Corwin was sitting at his desk one day in November. He had not been able to work. Somehow, though he had no sympathy with the war, he felt eager, expectant. It seemed to him that great events portended. A dozen times during the day he had got up, to go to one of the windows and look down into the street. He saw people hurrying, with springy step and alert manner—as though they desired to finish the tasks before them before that something for which they waited, should occur.

Corwin did not see Molly King watching him; he did not see in the girl's eyes a certain gleam of understanding and pity. For Molly knew that the end was near—that victory for the army in which her brother was fighting was imminent—and she knew that there would come a day for Corwin when he would wish, sorrowfully and regretfully, that he had been an enthusiastic supporter of the Government.

And some glimmer of that regret was already clutching at Corwin. He was uneasy, restless. For he, too, felt that victory was at hand, and he had done nothing toward winning it.

Something lacked in Corwin; there was a void somewhere in his heart. He felt as a child feels who has not received an invitation to a party which all its friends will attend. He was an outsider—forgotten, unconsidered.

Corwin's face was grave and slightly pale when he walked away from the window and resumed his chair at the desk.

It was not long after Corwin dropped into the chair until the screech of a whistle floated into the office. The sound was loud, insistent, continuing. It seemed to shriek exultantly—seemed to bear a message—the message, in rose, clear and penetrating, rocking the air with its resonance. Then it was joined by others—hundreds, it seemed—of varying degrees of power and volume. Hugs and deep, they came, and shrill and piping—trumpets, brasses, baritones—harsh, soft, trilling, blatan—

At the first long, continuing blast, Molly King bounded out of her chair and ran to an open window. Her eyes flashing with delight, her cheeks flushed, her voice high-pitched and eager, she called to someone in the street. Corwin heard the reply:

"The Armistice has been signed!"

Falltown was already celebrating. A multitude of varying sounds arose and added through the office windows, assailing Corwin's ears. It seemed to him that every citizen of the town must be in the street in front of the office, and that each citizen was trying to make more noise than his neighbor.

Molly was putting on her hat when Corwin again looked at her. Her eyes were very bright—they glowed with a light that made Corwin's widen with admiration.

"I can't work any more today, Mr. Corwin!" she said; "I've simply got to go out and celebrate! I shall be back tomorrow morning—if I survive!"

Corwin sat alone in his office. He, too, was glad the war was over. But his gladness was tinged with bitterness. If he had been a hypocrite he would have joined the crowds on the streets. But not being a hypocrite he did not go. He sat there, his chin on his chest—thinking. And quite pronounced in this thoughts was that theory of individualism which had bothered him for many days.

CHAPTER VII

It was pure perverseness on Corwin's part that made him antagonistic toward the fifth loan—the Victory Liberty Loan. To be consistent he must oppose it. He had not subscribed for the others—except to the extent of the thousand dollars Molly King had forced from him—and he did not intend to subscribe to the Victory Loan. To Molly, one morning in late April, he said, derisively:

"It's time for people to wake up and realize that the war is over. Do they think the country will stand for these loans forever? Don't those grafters ever get enough?"

"Grafters?" Molly's voice was cold. Her gaze was scornfully defiant. "Mr. Corwin," she went on, evenly, "you don't mean to say that you think all of the money obtained from the bond issues has been stolen?"

Corwin's smile was almost a sneer. "Plenty of it has gone into the pockets of grafters," he replied.

"All public money is subject to that risk," Molly declared; "it is quite impossible to prevent some of the money going where it should not go. It is impossible to prevent much of it, for the nature of the public work—and particularly war work—makes it easy for certain unscrupulous men to take things that do not belong to them. In war work, especially, is there great opportunity for diverting funds. It is emergency work and there is no time to take even ordinary measures to safeguard the public funds. Men must be trusted and some of them violate their trust. That isn't the fault of the Government—it is the men themselves who are to blame. If they were Americans they would not do it."

"Well, I know some of it cannot be prevented," admitted Corwin. "But how about extravagance?"

"That can't be helped, either," declared the girl. "When a war comes the Government finds itself in need of certain things. Those things must be obtained quickly. There is no time to split hairs over dollars. Business men must be assured that they will be treated generously or they will not turn out the work the Government demands from them. If you find yourself suddenly in need of a gun to defend yourself with—and a highwayman threatening you—you are not going to haggle very long over the price of a gun which a man behind you is offering you. You need the gun and you are going to pay what the man asks for it."

"Well, there may be something in that—possibly you are right. But the war is over. Why should it be necessary to have another Liberty Loan?"

"I thought of that when I heard they were proposing another loan," the girl replied. "And I asked my rather about it. He said that the American army had provided the punch which had won the war, and that it had been the magnitude of our preparations which had convinced Germany of the hopelessness of fighting longer. Germany saw that we meant to win. Germany was convinced that we would win, because we were getting enough war materials together—men, munitions and other things—to make the victory for us certain. If we had gone about the thing half-heartedly—if any one of the Liberty Loans had failed—Germany would not have asked for an armistice.

Victory Verities

These rules, which are moral as any business, are the best for money-making:

1. Don't invest in anything until you think you know as much about its value as the seller; not about its market price, but about its value—then think again.
2. Associate yourself with people who have money; only you must not compete with them in expenditures. You can't do it, and they would not be pleased if you could.
3. Don't muzzle the ox that treads out your corn; that is, if some one is making a thousand dollars for you, give him a hundred to encourage him—or more.
4. Don't deal at all with people whom you can't trust. (Victory Loan Salesmen don't cheat).

TEXT BOOK SUIT IS BEGUN TODAY

Interest All Over the State in Suit Filed Over State Text Book Controversy.

Frankfort, Ky., April 16—Attorneys on both sides were busy today preparing for the hearing tomorrow before Circuit Judge Stout of the suit instituted by Prof. E. B. Weathers, of Franklin, to invalidate the recent State textbook adoption on the ground that the commission changed more than 50 per cent. of the common school subjects.

Laurence B. Finn, of Franklin, chairman of the State Railroad Commission, has been retained, with Hamilton & Polsgrove, of this city, by Prof. Weathers, and Judge E. C. O'Rear, of Frankfort, and Thomas W. Thomas, of Bowling Green, with Attorney General Morris, are defending the suit.

The answer of the defense will not be filed until tomorrow morning. Phil Grinstead, one of the authors of the spelling adopted by the commission, is here in consultation with the attorneys.

The author of one of the spellers offered for adoption is reported to have received a proposition to sell the speller since the suit was instituted.

FRAME-UP ON JUDGE INDICATED BY TESTIMONY

Judge Cochran Dismisses Jury in Fryer Suit After Witness Tells of Offer Made Him.

Hearing of a suit by Mattie Borton Fryer, divorced wife of Louis P. Fryer, Circuit Court Judge of Robertson, Poudleton, Nicholas and Harrison counties, Kentucky, against Eva Bradford Fryer, present wife of Judge Fryer, to recover $50,000 for the alleged alienation of the affections of Judge Fryer, was halted in the United States Court at Covington yesterday when Judge A. M. J. Cochran ordered that the swearing of the jury be set aside and set the suit for hearing on June 24, when a special session of the Federal Court has been called.

The action was upon motion of Attorney Worth Dickerson for the complainant, following the testimony of John Fath, railroad employee, of Livingston, Ky. Fath testified regarding a conversation in September, 1917, when, he said, J. H. Kinahan, railroad employee, had offered him $200 to "assist in getting something on Judge Fryer and Mrs. Bradford." Fath said Kinahan had indicated to him that he (Kinahan) was to receive one half of any sum which would be recovered in the suit.

In bringing the case to a conclusion Judge Cochran said the testimony of Fath was offered to show bias on the part of Kinahan who now lives in Newton, Kan., and who, in a deposition read at the trial, charged that Mrs. Bradford had told him of meetings with Judge Fryer at her home in Butler, Ky.; in Cincinnati and Detroit. Kinahan testified he had boarded with Mrs. Bradford in Butler, Ky., during the summer of 1917.

Mrs. Eva Bradford Fryer on the stand denied all the allegations made in Kinahan's deposition, and declared his action in making the deposition was prompted by spite because she ordered him from her home after he had made scurrilous remarks about her women friends, and had declared he was in love with Hilda Bradford, daughter of the defendant.

Judge Cochran said Fath's statement was no reflection upon the plaintiff, but that Kinahan lived out of the jurisdiction of the Court and that he could not compel his attendance. Attorneys for the plaintiff say they will try to obtain a statement from Kinahan relative to Fath's testimony.

JURY IN MCGARVEY CASE IS SELECTED; EVIDENCE BEGUN

Practically the Entire Afternoon Spent By Lawyers in Selecting Jurors to Try Alleged Rape Case—Many Women in Attendance.

The court room had a good sized crowd in it this morning when court was opened and the case against Harry McGarvey, former mate on the excursion steamer Homer Smith, charged with having carnal knowledge of a female under 16 years of age was called.

Considerable time was spent in the morning in getting ready to try the case and when the defense announced that there were two very important witnesses they wanted to get here, court was adjourned until one o'clock in the afternoon.

Practically all of the afternoon was spent in selecting a jury. The regular panel was soon exhausted and several by-standers were summoned by the sheriffs. At 3:15 the jury was completed and is composed of the following gentlemen: W. F. Steele, A. P. Lukins, Roger Peers, Frank Clarke, J. P. Marshall, Harvey Wells, W. L. Gault, John Brishols, M. R. Hirschfeld, William Fritz, E. L. Cabbish and A. C. James.

The first witness introduced by the Commonwealth was Dr. E. T. Henderson, of Ashland, who was introduced to prove the age of Myrl Perkins, the chief prosecuting witness. It is not expected that much evidence will be heard this afternoon.

As County Attorney W. H. Rees represents the Steamboat Company in a civil action growing out of this matter he declined to act in this case and Hon. A. D. Cole was appointed acting County Attorney.

The demand for pure bred Rhode Island Red Eggs in Mason county is growing almost daily. Many requests from nearby counties have been made and it is hardly thought that the Poultry Association will be able to fill the demand. The reputation of Mason county's fowls has gone abroad over the land.

TIME LIMIT MAY BE PUT ON GERMANS

Allies May Force Germans to Sign Peace Treaty by May 15.

Paris, April 17—The Germans may be required to sign the peace treaty by May 15, it was learned on good authority today.

There was difference of opinion among delegates regarding advisability of setting a time limit, but the majority appeared to believe the period between April 25 and May 15 would be sufficient for the German government to debate and ratify provisions.

Those opposed to fixing a time limit contended the allies might not be ready to receive the Germans by April 25.

Delegates favoring May 15 as the time for acceptance of the treaty pointed out that unless some curf was established on the Germans consideration of the treaty would be drawn out indefinitely.

The invitation to the Germans was forwarded before all belligerents had an opportunity to sign it. It is understood to have been taken by courier to Spa when the five great powers had signed the text. The 18 smaller belligerents were called in yesterday and the document was read to them. No objection was offered and the additional signatures were affixed. The meeting was pure by formal, but necessary, as 23 nations were at war with Germany, instead of five. The document bearing the signatures of the smaller nations was hurried to Spa in the wake of the first message.

MR. AND MRS. DODDS IN CHARGE OF REVIVAL MUSIC

Carl Dodds and Wife Will Conduct the Music at Revival Beginning at First Baptist Church Monday Evening.

The committee in charge of music for the revival which begins at the First Baptist Church on next Monday evening has completed arrangements for the music for the series. Mr. Carl Dodds, who on several occasions has demonstrated his ability as a leader of chorus choirs and Mrs. Dodds, who is recognized over this section as an extraordinary soloist, will be in complete charge of all music.

A large platform will be built over the pulpit floor and the chorus choir to be organized will sit behind the pulpit on the ground floor. A piano will be used for the instrumental music for the most of the series and Miss Stein Archdeacon, gifted organist and pianist, will preside at the instrument.

These arrangements assure the revival of music that will prove above the ordinary and the musical part of the programs will prove no small part.
